

Before it goes to the client

Four checks for any AI-assisted work. Most take a few minutes.

1 Should AI do this?

Match the task to who should do it.

Low stakes and easy to check, like slide titles or formatting

Let AI draft

Needs judgment, a relationship or accountability, like a recommendation

Keep it human

Somewhere in between, like summaries or estimates

AI drafts, you decide

2 Protect the client

Before anything goes into an AI tool:

- ☐ I'm using a firm-approved AI tool
- ☐ I'm sharing only the data the task needs
- ☐ Customer names and account numbers are taken out
- ☐ Nothing under NDA or marked confidential goes in

3 Check for the three errors

Invented facts

Can I open the source behind every number, name and quote?

Bias

Does any wording about people rest on a stereotype instead of evidence?

Missing information

Did I skim the originals for anything the summary left out?

4 Own it

Before you hit send:

- ☐ It's rewritten in my own words
- ☐ It cites the real sources, not the AI
- ☐ I've asked about anything I'm unsure of, before it goes out
- ☐ I'd be comfortable explaining every line to the client

If a number surprises you, that's your cue to open the source.
